

Graphic Designer

Project-based. Part time. NYC or remote.

POSITION OVERVIEW

We are looking for a Jack, Jill or Jungle Cat of design to work with our team on the graphic redesign of our second museum series, the Perpetual Motion Museum. Design will include layout of copy and graphics on the museum itself, generation of new graphics to illustrate our content, and layout for printing graphics on 3M, cut vinyl and dry transfer.

This is a part time contract with a swift timeline for interview and onboarding. Approximately 4-8 hours / week. Compensation will be based on experience.

SKILLS

- Expert at Adobe Illustrator
- Capable of creating simple illustration and iconography
- Graphic printing experience, such as bleed, color proofing, etc.

BONUS SKILLS

- Experience working on museum exhibits
- Experience working on education materials
- Experience working on designs for public information campaigns
- Website design and layout

TRAITS

- Must be a self starter who can work without constant oversight
- Be good at working within the style set by the MICRO team, but creative within these parameters
- Effective and organized, but fun to work with
- Very detail oriented
- Proactive - notice and address all things as they come up
- Must take pride in your work and have high standards for everything you produce

ABOUT MICRO

MICRO creates six-foot-tall museums that transform public spaces into interactive learning environments, making world-class museum experiences accessible to all.

We bring together scientists, designers, and storytellers to squeeze a vast, complex world into museums the size of vending machines. Then we replicate the tiny museums and install them in unexpected places like hospital waiting rooms, transit hubs, and the DMV.

MICRO was founded by a former NASA researcher and a media producer. We have since expanded to also include a novelist, an educator, and mechanical engineer, but at MICRO we all wear many hats. We're a small, close-knit team; a curious, eclectic bunch that is always excited to bring on new team members for collaboration.
